

So you think you'd like to wear all (or mostly) dresses in order to look and feel more feminine?

The first thing you'll need to remember is that dressing differently than you've been accustomed to your whole life is not always easy.

The following are some steps that will help you to be successful in your goals:

1. If you are married, check with your husband before you do anything else. The Bible does not tell us to wear only dresses, but it does tell us to obey and reverence our husbands. We should dress first to please him.
2. Get rid of all your pants. Okay, okay, keep one or two if you must, but get rid of most of them. That way you're not tempted to go back to wearing pants the first challenge you meet.
3. Plan for every situation. You will need comfortable, feminine clothing for housework, for casual wear, for church. You might need outdoor skirts that can be worn with tennis shoes and t-shirts, maybe even shorter skirts along with a modest skirted bathing suit for the beach. If you live in a climate with cold winters, you'll need long, heavy skirts along with appropriate feminine undergarments to keep warm.
4. Where to get all of this? If cash is a problem, you might try second hand stores or yard sales, Ebay, or sewing them yourself. Or you might want to make the change more gradually, buying skirts rather than pants whenever you purchase new clothing.
5. As alluded to before, winter is a particular challenge. Longer skirts are less drafty, and tights or a nice pair of feminine pantaloons or bloomers underneath will make the cold less of a problem than if you were wearing pants.
6. Don't fall into the trap of wearing all denim skirts or jumpers. Denim is great on occasion, but since your goal is to look and feel more feminine, choose soft, flowing fabric whenever possible.
